

THE AUTHOR was born at Sydney, Australia, in 1902. After attending schools at Bulli and Woonona he went to Wollongong High School and Sydney Boys' High School, graduated B.A. and LL.B. at the University of Sydney, and practised as a solicitor in Sydney from 1927 to 1984. In 1928 he married Elizabeth Henrietta Elliott, who died in 1983. They had one son and four grandchildren. He now resides at Lakemba in Sydney.

He became a Georgist in 1930 at the beginning of the great depression, and commenced teaching economics in the same year. In 1937, in association with Jack Brandon (who died in 1980) he founded The N.S.W. (later Australian) School of Social Science, of which he was the Director until 1982, and which has now merged in The Association for Good Government. He has been the prolific author of booklets,, articles, pamphlets, articles, papers, letters and poems expounding economics and social philosophy. This is his first book.

In Sydney he has also been actively associated with the Anglican Church for many years, but has so far found little favourable response from that body to the philosophy of freedom and justice, or the study of economics, other than a whole-hearted participation in the surface relief of poverty which yearly worsens world-wide.

Acknowledgements

The author gratefully acknowledges great encouragement and assistance from Georgist individuals and publications around the world, notably "The Standard" and "Good Government" (Sydney) and "Progress" (Melbourne), over many years, and appreciates permission from Dr. L. Hemingway and Mr. Graham Hart to publish extracts from their writings.
