

Contents

CHAPTER I

3

The Exodus. The promise of the first covenant. God commands Moses. The law and testimony. The commandments. Moses teaches the people. The death of Moses. The renewal of the covenant of the fathers. The by-laws and regulations. The people promise to obey. The calf of gold. The Moses of the covenant. The incomparable story. Aaron and the priests. Saul. The great injunction. An economic paradise. The great law-giver. Provisions for servants and the poor. The fundamental law: "Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's landmark." The third curse. The purpose of creation. The scientific mind. Bertrand Russell and the Divine Law. The economic position today.

CHAPTER II

22

The rule of Joshua. The reign of Saul. The dispersion. The son of Amoz. The story of Ahab. Dean Milman on the fundamental law. The breakdown of the Mosaic system. The lament of Jeremiah. The cry for justice. The story of Hanameel's field. The Rechabites. Righteousness. The law of responsibility. None to restore the landmark. Daniel and the curse. Hosea and the landmark. Micah and spoliation. Haggai and wages. Malachi's indictment. The letter to Artaxerxes. Nehemiah. The great restoration. The finding of the book. The old covenant read by Ezra.

CHAPTER III

34

The position in the second century B.C. "No peace to the wicked." The last eight chapters of the book of Isaiah. Dr. Eisler's The Messiah Jesus. Dr. Klausner's Jesus of Nazareth. The fifty-eighth chapter. Poems calling for justice. The substance of the law. Remember the days of old. The sixty-fifth chapter. The new Jerusalem. The archaeologists. Petrie and Garstang. Primitive beginnings. Anthropologists and sociologists. The darkness of the long past. The economic basis of civilization. The genealogy of man. Man's first parents. Customs and rights. African tribes. Nomads and agriculturists. The beginnings of the slave state. Primitive tillers of the soil. The exploitation of labour. From spud to plough. Man discovers his purpose and vocation. The beginnings of religion. Deity-making. Superstition. Ancient literatures. Theogonies. Plutarch on worship. Chrysippus on the beginnings of justice. Pain and the medicine-man. The first altar. Poetry and art. Magic and medicine. The Li Ki. Correct government. The root of justice. The Books of Kan. The Zend Avesta. The never-failing law. The Vendidad. Zarathustra. The Khandogya-Upanishad. The Gathas.

CHAPTER IV

55

The region of man's misery. The Apastamba. The code of Hammurabi. The history of the Ziggurat. Greek literature. Hesiod. The legends of Prometheus and Pandora. "A golden race of mortal men." The reforms of Lycurgus. The gold question. The policy of Solon. The disburdenment. The earth in bondage. The laws of Draco. Aristotle on justice. Slaves. Aristotle and landed property. "Living implements." The Nemesis of Nations. Anacharsis and Solon's reforms.

CHAPTER V

68

Plato's The Republic. Jowett's preface. The search for justice. The commentators on The Republic. Walter Pater. How the debate on justice began. Glaucon states the received account of the nature and origin of justice. Socrates discouraged. The creation of the state. The true creator is necessity. The economic beginning. No restrictive laws. Where, then, is justice? Civilized public opinion. The conditions of Athens laid bare. The creation of the luxurious state. How justice and injustice originate. "A slice of our neighbour's land." The cause of war. The causes of almost all the evils in the state. Soldiers and guardians. The state at fever-heat. Failing to recognize justice. The institution of a natural order and government. The definition of justice. The pure individualism of the first four books. Communism and socialism. Philosophers and kings. The creation of the communist state. The ambition of the rich. Philemon's epitaph.

CHAPTER VI

86

Seneca's letter "On Master and Slave." The Forum. Imperialism. The god of boundaries. Property. The economic meaning of the term. Old Roman land laws. Conquest and decay. Militarism and poverty. Scipio at Carthage.

CHAPTER VII

93

The search for justice. Christian fathers. Lactantius. His definition of religion. Anselm's dialogue on truth. Aquinas's definition of justice. Clear definitions of the medievalists. The sixteenth and seventeenth century fundamentalists: Hooker, Locke, and Butler. The Analogy of Religion. Spengler and a second religiousness.

CHAPTER VIII

105

The real Kant. The Philosophy of Law. The "Science of Right." The formulæ of Ulpian. Kant's rendering. The definition of "his own." The economic basis of natural right. Natural right includes distributive justice as well as commutative justice. Adam Smith's The Theory of Moral Sentiments. Patrick Edward Dove. The Theory of Human Progression. Man's achievements and pauperism. The search for a just system. What should be done? The new restoration. Dove's solution of the economic problem. The power of political servants. The weakness of enfranchised masters. The futile vote. Philanthropic Christianity. Jesus and the poor. The reign of justice or war, greed, and poverty.

CHAPTER IX

116

The condition of Western civilization. Politicians and editors. State and private charity. What a hungry man thinks. The tax drain. Depression warnings. The machine. The apprentice system. The prolongation of the crisis. The city-bred youth. The non-union man. The luxury of government. Redress of grievance before supply. The new juggernaut. Invention and hunger.

CHAPTER X

124

Modern theories of the organization of the state. Léon Duguit's Law in the Modern State. A new system. Confusions of the legal sociologist. The Virginian Declaration. Franz Oppenheimer's The State. "From the sociological standpoint only, not from the juristic." The genesis of the state. Land pre-empted politically. The "economic means" versus the "political means." The purpose of the state. The industrial city opposed to the state. Oppenheimer's economics. The Marxian morass. The nature of rent. Old methods and new problems. Grievance before supply. Tax strikes.

CHAPTER XI

137

The question of rights. The apathy of the voting masses. The church and the question of natural rights. The new cry: "Slave for the bureaucracy." Balanced budgets and greater debt. "The thimblerigging business." A glance backward. Carlyle's Past and Present. Viscount Goschen's essays. The crises of 1866-67 and 1876: "Silver has fallen twenty per cent, Anglo-Indians are aghast. The financial world is in tribulation. Political economists are at their wits' end." The depression of 1885. The present situation. How much political government is necessary, and how much is really worth paying for? Economic committees and the chief problem: unemployment and poverty. One certain way: land and labour. The difficulties of change. The evil of taxing wealth. The warnings of experts. The luxurious bureaucracy. Land value must be taken for the use of the community.

CHAPTER XII

151

The physiocratic theory. Professor Ritchie's Natural Rights. Ritchie's wrong methods of approach. The American and French declarations of the eighteenth century. Ritchie and Thomas Paine. Aristotle's responsibility for leading philosophers astray. Maine's Ancient Law. The true approach. A type of perfect law. Vaihinger and the consciously false. The third curse of the Hebrews. Ritchie and slavery. The horrors of civilized warfare.

CHAPTER XIII

165

Industrial and philanthropic movements in lieu of justice. The work of reformers. Drugging the public mind. Property, Its Duties and Rights. Canon Gore's inquiry. Groping in the dark. Professor Geldart's essay. Professor Hobhouse's definition of property. Dr. Rashdall and John Locke. The condition of agriculture. The city-bred man and the land. The Decline of the West. The return to the state of the fellaheen.

CHAPTER XIV

175

The prophecy of Professor Zimmern. Books on Jesus. Jesus of the gospels. The man-in-the-street and the church. "Are you in favour of the reign of God on earth?" The Archbishop of Canterbury and equality of opportunity. The church's failure to bind men. Taxation and the church. Bureaucracy versus religion. Fuddle-headed legislators. Federal investigations and the Stock Exchange. "Calamity howlers." They have to take their medicine. The economic position of the serf. Coddled and guided man. Business men in politics.

The political fetish. The capacities of the chore-man. Where education should begin. The motive of mankind. The potential worth of the political dupe.

CHAPTER XV

188

Renan's Life of Jesus. Dr. Robinson's Decline and Fall of the Hebrew Kingdoms. The decline of the Mosaic system. The descent into slavery. The reforms of Josiah. The exactions of the priests. The old law book. "Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's landmark." The "new" covenant. The prophets and economic justice. The old law of Moses.

CHAPTER XVI

196

The economic conditions of Galilee. The campaign of Judas of Gaulon. John the Baptist and Judas. Joseph the tax-farmer. Guerrilla warfare. The demands laid before Archelaus. Josephus on Judas. The Zealots. Unlawful tribute. Galilee described by Josephus. The inalienability of land under the old law. "The milking process." Schürer on the contributions which the priests received from the people. A story by the rebel leader Korah. The rapacity of the ruling classes. Eisler and a political revolution. The Deuteronomic Royalty Law. The attack on Sepphoris. The trades and produce of Galilee. The condition of small-holders. The business of laying field to field. Slaves and bond servants. Everything taxed. More's Utopia. The tariff decree of Palmyra, A.D. 137. Dr. Grant's The Economic Background of the Gospels. "Scientific" tariffs. Tariffs and poverty. The old system. Renan and Klausner on taxation. The Talmud and stolen money.

CHAPTER XVII

213

The education of Jesus. Torah and the instruction of children. Zealots' love of liberty. Hillel. Schools and colleges. Jesus the dreamer. Jesus versed in the law and the prophets. Not a Messiah of despair. The one perfect system. What was he chosen to do?

CHAPTER XVIII

220

The miracles. The sublimest faith of all. The mission of Jesus. Originality of the sayings. The Sermon on the Mount. The old law. "The salt of the earth." The beatitudes. Passive resistance.

Voluntary poverty. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." The economic optimism of Jesus. "No man can serve two masters." "O ye of little faith." God or Cæsar? The attitude of the church. "Your heavenly Father knoweth ye have need of all these things." Was Jesus an Essene? Jesus conscious of the perils of his teaching. The swordless campaign of non-resistance. The secret of his mission. The declaration at Cæsarea Philippi. The determination to go to Jerusalem. The disillusioned Jesus. Fear of the political authorities. A perfect spy system. Royal descent of Jesus.

CHAPTER XIX

245

Jesus and modern social movements. Spengler's criticism. The tribute money. The three test questions. The tribute question at Capernaum. Spengler, Klausner, and Eisler on the tribute question. A policy of despair. Jesus in Jerusalem. The march of events in sequence. Eisler and the entry into Jerusalem. The insurrection. Klausner and "a scourge of cords." Jesus at the Temple.

CHAPTER XX

255

The scene in the Temple. Klausner and a public-religious deed. The cause of the fear of the high priests and scribes. The doctrine he preached. The blasphemy idea. The family of Hannan. The trap laid by the Herodians. "Render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's and unto God the things that are God's." Mammon. King Agrippa's speech. The miracles. Émile Mâle and the "Bible of the poor." Why the Sanhedrin took action. "Why tempt ye me?" The grand climacteric. The seditious saying. Cæsar's world. The promise of Immanuel. Restoration and redemption.

CHAPTER XXI

278

The Prosecution of Jesus. Professor Husband's analysis. Was Jesus guilty of blasphemy? The action of the Sanhedrin. Pilate all for a verdict of "Not guilty." The witnesses. Judas Iscariot. The action of Pilate. Why did Pilate hesitate? The end.