

CONTENTS

Foreword

Chapter	Page
I. Introductory	1
Our task, 1; Law as governing all nature, 2; Our criterion, 3; Government, 5; Taxation, 10.
II. Principles of Taxation	15
Are there principles governing taxation? 15; Common honesty, 17; Return for equivalent benefit, 17; Cooperation must not be hampered, 19; Should taxation interfere with industry? 20; Taxation should not drive away or operate to exclude property and persons, 24; Taxes should remain where placed, 25.
III. Where Should Taxes Fall?	29
What property is benefited by taxation? 29; Why land values should be taxed, 31.
IV. Land Values	43
Distinction between land and other values, 43; How land values are calculated, 43; Various types of land values, 44.
V. Theories of Taxation	51
General considerations, 51; That all property should be taxed equally, 52; Taxing according to ability to pay, 59; Sales tax, 72; Inheritance taxes, 77; That all should pay, 80; Occupation and license taxes, 81.
VI. Nature of Property, Real and Personal	85
Meaning of the word "property", 85; What is "real estate"? 85; What is personal property? 88.
VII. Improvements	97
General considerations, 97; Relation between land and improvements, 101.
VIII. Effects of Present Methods	105
IX. Objections to Our Propositions	119
Some mere declamation, 119; Confiscation, 120; Hardship to present owners, 122; Government revenues will be too great—or too small, 126; Minor objections, 128.
X. The Farmer and Taxation	133
XI. How May Transfer of Taxation Be Obtained?	147
Statement of the problem, 147; Justice, not abolition of poverty, our aim, 153; Mechanical side of our procedure, 153.
XII. Progress of Our Ideas	159
Some general considerations, 159; Progress in the United States, 161; Progress in other countries, 172.
XIII. Some Special Problems	177
Mineral lands, 177; Forest lands, 183; Transportation, power and light, and like monopolies, 184; Monopoly and privilege, 185.
XIV. As to the Future	189
Index	191

768701