

A philanthropic New York woman was entertaining in the spacious grounds of her suburban residence a large number of East Side children. On her round of hospitality she was impressed with one strikingly beautiful little girl. She could not have been more than nine years old, but her coal-black eyes flashed with intelligence. The hostess introduced herself and began a conversation.

"Does what you see here today please you?" she asked.

The child eyed her host in silence.

"Talk away," said the lady. "Don't be afraid."

"Tell me," then said the child, "how many children have you got?"

Astonished at the question, the lady hesitated for a moment, and then entered into the fun of the situation.

"Ten," she replied.

"Dear me," answered the child, "that is a very large family. I hope you are careful and look after them. Do you keep them all clean?"

"Well, I do my best."

"And is your husband at work?"

"My husband does not do any kind of work. He never has."

"That is very dreadful," replied the little girl

earnestly, "but I hope you keep out of debt."

The game had gone too far for Lady Bountiful's enjoyment of it.

"You are a very rude and impertinent child," she burst out, "to speak like that, and to me."

The child became apologetic. "I'm sure I didn't mean to be, ma'am," she explained. "But mother told me before I came that I was to be sure to speak to you like a lady, and when any ladies call on us they always ask us those questions."—New York Evening Post.

First Premise—"Men are single-minded and attend to business."

Second Premise—"Women can be always diverted from duty by pleasure."

Conclusion—"Therefore, baseball crowds are for the most part composed of men."—Judge.

Manager—"What's the leading lady in such a tantrum about?"

Press Agent—"She only got nine bouquets over the footlights tonight."

"Great Scott! Isn't that enough?"

"No. She paid for ten."—Tit-Bits.
