15. Protestant Episcopal clergyman, author of many widely circulated religious writings and several novels.
17. Incorporated in 1824.
19. See Henry George, Diary I, Jan., Feb., and March, 1855, HGC. (There are five diaries for 1855 but no one of them is complete. The writer has numbered them in an effort to eliminate confusion. Diary I, on folded paper and written in both pencil and ink, begins on January 6 and continues to March 31. The second diary, composed of two small hand-stitched books, is marked "Sea Journal," as it starts on the _Hindoo_ as a ship’s log. This is the most complete of all the diaries; it covers most of the period between May 27, 1855, and March 12, 1856. Sea Journals II, III, and IV are, for the most part, "fair copies," carefully written in Spencerian penmanship. These three cover many of the same months and are evidently different interpretations, made later and on shore, of the roughly written and now almost faded Sea Journal I. Sea Journal III peters out as a diary after Aug. 29, 1855; it contains lists of the kings of England and the presidents of the United States and quotations from Emerson, Carlyle, etc. Sea Journal IV records a few weeks of 1855, of 1856, and of 1857, sketches of ships and sailors and penciled impressions of Calcutta and of the beauty of a storm.)

4. This apt characterization, the origin of which is obscure, was, of course, made popular by the late Frank Norris. His novel of that title, a useful contribution to the record of this period, is one of the American classics of social criticism. The Octopus (New York: Doubleday, Page, 1901).
11. It was new, of course, only to dominant thought in Western civilization. George’s followers have found many anticipations of his ideas, not only in times recent to his, but, in a number of instances, in earlier times. His own efforts to credit the French Physiocrats as his forerunners was based on inadequate second- or third-hand information about their theory; the Physiocrats were only partial anticipators, several of which were almost perfect parallelisms. George’s conception actually was as original as any contribution in his field; on this see Dr. George Geiger’s thorough study of the problem, The Theory of the Land Question (New York: Macmillan, 1936).

Wigmore, it was first advocated by a member of the Philadelphia Civil Reform Association in 1882, in a pamphlet called ‘English Elections.’ The following year Henry George in the North American Review advocated the adoption of the English system as a cure for the vice arising from the use of money in elections.”—P. 18.

Father Dawson wrote (Sept. 2, 1933): "My recollection [is] that Henry George, as he must have told me himself, was the inspirer and writer of the manifesto. He had to write it. The Irishmen were so broken that terrible night and day that they could do nothing... The expression 'noble vision' is evidently George's." Told that the writer was unable to confirm his belief, Father Dawson on May 20, 1889, replied: "... It is not surprising... [Henry George] could not in honor make the fact (if it be a fact) known... And the Irish politicians themselves, however grateful, could never wish to reveal (if so it were) that in doing all they could they had only signed."
