Dear Mr. Dodson:

I enjoyed your response to my article in the American Journal of Economics & Sociology. I agreed essentially with everything you said.

You might be interested to know that Robert Andelson introduced me to the writings of Henry George in a seminar I took with Andelson on Modern Ethical Theories. Unfortunately, most modern economists are unfamiliar with George, or even worse, misunderstand him. Few are aware, even, of Milton Freidman's statement that "a tax land rent is the least bad tax conceivable".

Sincerely,
