

tled, and properly and fairly settled, or a revolution would occur in America similar to the terrible French Revolution and he is an omnivorous student of that problem. Probably for the first time in the history of the labor movement the universal rule of labor unions forbidding endorsements of political candidates was disregarded when more than a hundred unions in various parts of the State adopted resolutions endorsing Fisher's candidacy; and many of them made appropriations to help in paying his campaign printing and postage bills. This unprecedented action of the labor organizations was a graceful acknowledgment of gratitude to the man who is, more than any other, responsible for the Workmen's compensation measure, which was adopted at the legislative session of 1913, when Fisher had worked hard for its success during two terms of the assembly and had created universal demand for it in many public addresses delivered after the refusal of the assembly of 1911 to adopt it. And he worked without pay and simply because of his conviction of the justice of such a measure, even refusing $800, which the legislature awarded him to repay his actual expenses during his endeavors to secure its passage.

Fisher is not what politicians call a "good loser;" he is rather a good fighter, like his Scotch ancestors, and like President Wilson, whom he greatly resembles in many respects. He is an extraordinary speaker and convincing, though not an "orator," as his tone is conversational and he rarely even moves a hand. His friends hope great things of him because of his undoubted honesty, ability and desert, which must appeal to the many voters he is to address in the course of his projected tour of the State.

INCIDENTAL SUGGESTIONS

FOR TENANTS AND SMALL HOME OWNERS.

New York, October 12.

Not since the Civil War have the workers of this country been in so hard a position as at present. Scores of thousands throughout the country are out of work—other scores are working part time, while many cities, like New York, are threatening to retrench in needed improvements, and so to add to the armies of unemployed.

Prices of food stuffs have risen.

The European War and thrifty purchasing in reasonable amounts by housewives are assigned as causes for high prices. Neither "reason" explains the jump in prices.

The farms east of the Mississippi could raise food for the entire country. The United States could feed the world, if all farms were cultivated to their full productivity.

Production and consumption of both food and manufactured products is limited by taxing producers nearly 2 per cent of the value of their products, in addition to compelling them to pay land speculators enormous profits for opportunity to produce anything. This raises prices to consumers, and naturally limits consumption.

Europe is struggling to overthrow the militarist system, under which "every laborer carries a soldier on his back."

America is struggling to overthrow the land monopoly system, under which every worker is carrying a land monopolist on his back.

Tenants and small home owners will do well to resolve to enlist to overthrow land monopoly. Nowhere else is it so firmly entrenched and such a menace as in our cities, where it is more deadly than militarism in Europe.

Only one out of every thirteen persons, over ten years of age, in gainful occupations, is a member of organized labor. It is, therefore, necessary for the twelve-thirteenths of the workers of the country to take steps to secure employment at decent wages.

TRIFLING WITH SOCIAL PROBLEMS.

Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 12.

For years Big Business objected to compulsory education, when suddenly this opposition was withdrawn. And there appeared upon the horizon the new cry of vocational education and the continuation schools and "sich like." Why this sudden change of heart? To the thinking this is easy. Where formerly Big Business got the raw recruit at 14 to 16 semi-illegally, and trained him at its expense, under the new dispensation it got him at 14 to 16, legally, and partially or fully trained at the public expense. Here was a brilliant example of how Big Business, with its usual stupidity had overlooked a bet until brilliant but misguided reformers had shown it a way.

Recently a typical American thing occurred in our town, which gave me a clue to a new phase of Big Business' methods. I may be in error as to this, but think not. There are always good people who start things, and then, when it proves burdensome as to time or money, proceed to unload it onto the tax-paying public. This town was no exception. It started an amateur recreation commission, which, aided by a newspaper, really did some good work. It started playgrounds, baseball, etc. But the playgrounds deteriorated into loafing places, and the baseball into rowdiness, and it was time to dump them. First school athletic leagues were started and the board induced to accept it. Now this commission desires the school board to take over all its activities. Aided by a subservient superintendent, who partly perverted county aid to teachers' institute funds, a Mr. Curtis devoted the entire week of the institute to boost school playgrounds, their needs and uses. After the botch the amateur commission had made of affairs I must confess I was provoked, and expressed my displeasure to the principal of the high school, who had recently returned from the St. Paul meeting of the National Educational Association. He is a broad-minded man and said a gentleman at that meeting had told him that the public playground movement was on a par with the "swat-the-fly" campaign. This gave me an idea. I looked it up and cogitated thereon. Who is back of this movement? Largely the Russell Sage Foundation, aided also by the Carnegie and Rockefeller funds. Is history repeating itself?
