Shortage in Meat Supply.

An insufficiency to the extent of 18,000,000 in the supply of meat animals in proportion to demand in the United States since 1910 is disclosed in a statement issued on February 1 by the Department of Agriculture. The reasons given are as follows:

(1) The encroachment of farms upon the range territory. (2) The lack of a proper range leasing law. (3) The shortage in the corn and forage crop due to the severe drought in Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma in 1913. (4) The increase in the value of land and the increased cost of labor and stock feed. (5) The decline in stock raising on farms in the East and South. (6) The temptation to sell live stock at the prevailing high prices rather than to continue to carry them with high priced stock feed. (7) Enormous losses from hog cholera. (8) The competition of higher prices for other farm products.

Suffragists at Washington.

By a tie vote on January 24 the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives failed to bring in a report favorable to the creation of a standing committee of the House on Woman Suffrage. Two Republicans, Messrs. Lenroot of Wisconsin and Campbell of Kentucky, one Progressive, Mr. Kelly of Pennsylvania, and one Democrat, Mr. Foster of Illinois—voted for a favorable report, and four Democrats, Messrs. Hardwick of Georgia, Pou of North Carolina, Cantrill of Kentucky, and Garrett of Tennessee, voted against it. A motion that the resolution for a woman suffrage committee be reported to the House without recommendation from the Rules Committee was postponed by that committee until its next meeting. On February 3, the House Democrats in caucus decided against a woman suffrage committee, declaring by a vote of 123 to 57: "That it is the sense of the caucus that the question of woman suffrage is a State and not a national question."

On January 24 the Congressional Union—an independent group of woman suffragists whose reason for existence is to campaign for a Federal woman suffrage amendment—made announcement that its policy was "to ask for a woman suffrage constitutional amendment from the party in power in Congress and to hold them responsible for their answer to this request." Following close upon this declaration was reported the application for membership in the Union of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont—whose advocacy of militant suffrage methods is well known—and of Mrs. Ella S.

Stewart, a prominent Illinois suffragist, and the resignation from the Union—stating that declaration as her reason—of Mrs. McLennan, one of its leaders. To this Congressional Union's policy of "opposition to the party in power" the Congressional Committee of the National Woman's Suffrage Association is distinctly averse. The chairman of this committee, Mrs. Medill McCormick, sent the following letter to President Wilson on the 28th:

In view of the fact that the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage has publicly announced a policy contemplating an attack upon the Democratic party as a whole, and fearing lest this small group of suffragists acting under un-American and militant methods prejudice our cause, will you permit us to make clear that our organization, the National American Woman Suffrage Association, being strictly non-partisan, emphatically condemns this policy? We recognize that there are suffragists in all parties, that all parties have contributed to suffrage in ten States, and that all parties will in the near future write the principles of suffrage into nation-wide law. We oppose no party as a whole because a portion of its members cannot be counted among our legislative supporters.

Miss Lucy Burns, vice-chairman of the Congressional Union, in a letter to President Wilson next day is reported as disclaiming any intention on the part of her organization to attack the Democratic Party. [See current volume, page 35.]

On Monday, the 2nd, there was a suffrage demonstration under the auspices of the Congressional Union. Four hundred working women from ten different States gathered in Washington and marched to the White House where they were received by the President, who, in response to their request that he lend his support to the cause of woman suffrage, repeated in substance his reply to the suffragists who called upon him last December: "I have already explained," the President is reported as saying,—"because I felt obliged to explain—the limitations that are laid upon me as the leader of a party. Until the party as such has considered a matter of this supreme importance, and taken its position, I am not at liberty to speak as an individual, for I am not an individual. . . . All I can say to you is that the strength of your agitation is bound to make a profound impression upon any party." [See vol. xvi, p. 1185.]

Another Ocean Disaster.

The Old Dominion liner, Monroe, while twenty miles from Norfolk, Virginia, in the early morning of January 30, was struck by the Merchants' and Mimers' liner Nantucket, and immediately sank. Nineteen passengers and twenty-two of the crew were lost. Thirty-nine passengers and sixty
