

... and the earth does not change

As the novelist put it, one generation passes and another rises to take its place. The sun also rises and the earth does not change. But each passing generation clamors louder for security in this land of liberty. There is no reflection that men, so like prisoners, cannot have liberty and security at one and the same time.

In such a time the School points to the earth and remains steadfast. It continues to educate for an understanding of the basic principles upon which our economy rests and, which is more, for justice. The standard of this work is improving and more effective segments of our society are being taught the lessons and virtues of freedom.

The School and its extensions must turn to you for the financial support to continue to do our work and do it better. May we have your help?

The Henry George News, published monthly by the Henry George School of Social Science, 50 E. 69th Street, New York, N. Y. 10021, supports the following principle:

The community, by its presence and activity, gives rental value to land, therefore the rent of land belongs to the community and not to the landowners. Labor and capital, by their combined efforts, produce the goods of the community—known as wealth. This wealth belongs to the producers. Justice requires that the government, representing the community, collect the rent of land for community purposes and abolish the taxation of wealth.
